MORE THOUGHTS FROM A SLIPPED GEAR.....

Well.....my rubber ducky has now melted to the side of the pool! The combines are mowing down and sucking up the crops of maze around us. As, they are doing that, they create a cloud of dust that you cannot see through. Our grass is in a color of brown and our pretty little hens (Mother Clucker's Egg Farm) are panting from the heat. We are now paying for the wonderful Spring that we got to enjoy earlier this year. The top on my car is always up and the A/C is getting its seasonal test by running full blast. Hurricanes are starting to form off Africa and making their way to our shores. Summer is in it's full impact and will be until about Labor Day weekend.

Now is the time to check your tires. No, I do not get a commission from the tire companies. But I did find out firsthand how important tire care is to our fun Summer time. Now, what we experienced was not from lack of attention; but this only proves how critical tire knowledge can be. We had, two year old Firestone tires on our hauler; the big truck that we work out of during the year. So, age or brand was not an issue, and we monitor every tire in the cab for pressure, so tire pressure was not an issue. The time last year was about now, so the heat probably played some part in the blowout. The age of your tires should be under 5 years, even if garage kept. This is due to rubber break down by old man time. The tire pressure should be checked before any cruise and then, take a look at the tread depth as well as the condition of the tires themselves. We were lucky and had a good calm driver at the wheel. We were in the right lane doing about 60 to 65 mph approaching a deep culvert crossing up ahead a short distance. When the front left tire blew; sending a dust of white stuff followed by complete covering of brown grass and dirt. Thanks to God there was no one beside us in the left lane. Now the shredded tire was pulling us into the left lane and then onto the shoulder and up onto the swell in the median. There, Billy managed to keep the truck on the swell until he could get the brakes to stop us, and we do have air brakes.

MORE FROM A SLIPPED GEAR.....

There was a Highway Patrol behind us and the first thing he wanted to do was to meet the driver to shake his hand for keeping the truck out of the oncoming lane. Looking back, I realized that the white was the actual fender, that had been pulverized into a fine dust. The brown was grass and dirt that was dug up by the carcass of the tire. We did stop short of the deep culvert, which would have probably destroyed us and the load. Now that is what you can call down and out.

After, catching our breath and checking the damage, we were most fortunate. All it took was money and not a lot of healing to fix the damage. I basically have a deep imprint of a picture as to what can so easily happen and how heat, etc. plays a part in our travels. "TRUCKERS call summer the season of "Gators (tire pieces) swimsuits and Flip Flops" all over the highways. I must agree with them. Next time you are out on the roads make it a game and count the tire chunks littered all around.

So, get out that car. Then check it over good, grab your honey (or best friend) and go for an evening cruise to avoid the heat. Those summer nights are calling for a new bunch of sweet memories to be filed away. Sunset is my favorite time of the day and you cannot get prettier sunsets anywhere else, than in Texas.

July 2018 NBACC Minutes

The club president, Sherry Dawson called the July NBACC meeting to order. I have to apologize because the meeting was held at Charles and Nita Bode's house the acoustics were not very good and I was having a hard time hearing what was said. A motion was made to accept the June minutes and was approved by Colleen Willard and seconded by Dexter Jones. We had several visitors attending the meeting.

Treasury Report

Marcia Hodgkins gave the treasury report. See below,

Care Committee

. Sonny Chapman has been placed in a nursing home and unfortunately has not been happy with the arrangements. Hopefully he will acclimate himself to the change.

Marcia Hodgkins is back with the group again after a short stay in the hospital for breathing problems. We are glad that she is back and doing better.
